

For the Bride's First Home— or the Home long established

The character of a room is really achieved by its incidental pieces. They are the touches of interest, variety and personality which are to the setting as the distinguished contrasting touches of color are to the ensemble of a charming costume.

Take the tea-wagon for instance. It is an essential in the modern home, an indispensable adjunct to either formal or informal entertaining. It is the bride's favorite, and something doubly appreciated by the hostess who has long felt the need of it among her household possessions.

There is only one genuine No-Mar furniture with the finish that is impervious to heats, acids, hot water, perfume, ink or any other liquid. To be sure you are buying genuine No-Mar, demand the name tag and guarantee that is attached to every piece.

A woman's desk too; the man of the house may have his den or his office—but the constant routine of housekeeping and social correspondence, demands an attractive headquarters. The little spinnet desks with their lines reminiscent of the quaint and decorative instrument of other days, are ideal for the living room or bedroom.

The console table which is traditionally connected with an overhanging mirror, is one of the most attractive modern revivals of a furnishing treatment of great charm. No room is too small to accommodate a console, and a mirror is known to add feet of length or breadth to any interior which it graces.
