

Lieut. Churchill Mann with his bride, the former Eleanor McLaughlin, of Parkwood, Oshawa

Left: Mrs. Eric Phillips
Oshawa, the bride's sister,
as matron of honor;
Prince B. King, of Toronto;
Miss Helen Steel, of Toronto;
Miss Margaret McLeod, of Toronto;
Miss Black, of Oil City, Pa.;
Miss Ruth Cowans, of Montreal;
Miss Mary Justin Mann, of the bridegroom's family; Miss Isobel McLaughlin, the bride's sister as maid of honor. In front of the two flower girls, Jocelyn and Diana Phillips, nieces of the bride.

Front row, from left:
Lieut. Arthur D. King,
of Royal Military College;
Lieut. Gordon B. King,
3rd Brigade, C.F.A.;
Lieut. Mann; Donald A. Grant,
Canadian Dragoons;
Edward A. Anglin, the General's Foot
Ottawa. Second row, left: Lieut. Bruce B. King, 8th Highlanders; Mr. J. H. Pangman, Oshawa;
A. Gordon Cameron,
General's Body
Lieut. G. Kenneth King,
The Royal Canadian
Barnes, Hamilton

OUT of the chapters of Parkwood's vibrant life, none more dramatic than the wedding day of the youngest daughter of the house, Eleanor. A debutante two seasons ago in this classic setting—a house of splendor and a garden of compelling beauty—August 30 witnessed her playing the stellar rôle in a pageant of early Victorian simplicity and beauty which has not been rivalled by any wedding fête of recent memory. Mr. and Mrs. R. Samuel McLaughlin welcomed five hundred guests from far and near upon their daughter's wedding afternoon. Only a few intimates saw the actual ceremony in the Aubusson tapestry hung drawing-rooms, but the gaiety of the nuptial feast quickly spread to the corners of the estate, culminating in its most picturesque moment, the ceremonial of the bridal procession across the wide, flagged, southern terraces under an archway of swords to the broad expanse of Parkwood's great green lawns. Scarlet and gold flashed in vivid contrast to the blush-pink of the bridesmaids' sweeping frocks; masses of autumn-tinged flowers lent the background for a continual play of color as guests moved in seemingly endless greeting to Lieut. Churchill Mann, son of Mr. Clarence C. Mann, of Toronto, and his bride. It was a guest list, dominated by those friends of the bride and the groom, who have been built up during a brilliant experience, for a young woman, in the show rings of Canada and the United States. Indeed, the very eve of her wedding was occupied in riding to thrilling wins the noted hunters of the Parkwood stables. So it was not unnatural that the long-to-be-envied array of wedding gifts had studied concern for the equestrian likes and dislikes of both the bride and her bridegroom. Their Excellencies the Viscount and Viscountess Willingdon were among those who sent gifts to the bride. The young couple departed on their honeymoon in a Cadillac 16, Mr. McLaughlin's gift to his daughter.

Miss Isobel McPhedran, of Toronto, who caught the bride's bouquet at the Mann McLaughlin wedding

