CORRECT ATTIRE FOR THE BRIDEGROOM

fashionable, in a popular sense, as they were. If you must wear spats, or rather, if you desire to wear spats to the June wedding, they should be of white linen and should be worn with shoes of black calfskin or patent leather. Plain black silk socks are correct. Either gray suede or white doeskin gloves should be worn. A final detail, but one which adds greatly to the completeness of the bridegroom's costume is the wearing of a boutonniere. At the moment there is nothing smarter than the white gardenia—although what may be termed a popular note is to have the boutonnieres of the bridegroom, best man and ushers miniatures of the bouquets which are carried by the bride and her attendants.
