

A short scene between Dick and his uncle should have previously been shown, in which Dick tells his uncle that the girl he had seen him with in the park was not the one accustomed to meet him, but had come there to defend her friend from him.

Dayton is now so overjoyed at finding Minette, and so desperately in love with her, that he ~~xxxxx~~ does everything in his power to win her, and tries to induce her and Nora to visit at the ranch. As the two girls desire to see Mrs. O'Rourke they are soon persuaded to go, and Dayton orders Buck to bring Nora's mother from the grain ranch to the cattle.

The beautiful trip is made by automobile. The roads are fine here, being the great Banff highway. Mrs. O'Rourke is at the gate to meet them, and ~~xxxxx~~ alternately embraces them and bursts into tears. Minette assures her that she is forgiven, and tells her of her trust and faith that "le bon dieu" is caring for her children, and that in His good time they will be returned to their mother.

Chu Chin Chow is so happy over the love that he sees between Minette and the boss that he fairly runs about in circles. Between him and Minette a friendship develops. Minette tells him about her babies, and shows him the picture of them? Chu runs into his bunk house and comes out with a picture of his eleven children, little Chinese tots, all in a row. Poor old Chu has not seen them for twelve years, but he tells Minette all of his savings have gone back to China to care for the little Chu's, and that the big boss has promised him a year's holiday